YALE'S ANCIENT FOOTBALL IS NO MATCH FOR HARVARD

Tried to Defeat Crimson With Grid Machine Twenty Years Behind Times.

BLUE BUNGLED THREE CHANCES

Brawn and Gameness of New Haven Aggregation Proved Futile Against Modern Style of Game Used by Cambridge Eleven.

[Special to The Times-Dispatch.] NEW YORK, Nov. 29.—Yale tried to beat Harvard with a football machine nearly twenty years out of date. Back around 1900, when Al Sharpe, the present head coach, played on a blue team, the bulldog was supreme at the old-fashioned line-camping attack. In those days five yards was the distance and muscle power the chief requisite for team at Cambridge. Yale received the old model unmodified, but football has undergone many radical changes. The Princeton and Harvard games have taught Yale that modern football will offset brawn and gameness.

The bulldog in the Crimson battle was like a giant who didn't know how to properly use his tremendous strength. The blue paid dearly for its ignorance of open football and not being able to realize its own line opportunities to win. The Elis had three wonderful chances to score, but nearly bungled each one.

The first of these came in the third period. One short forward pass and effective rushes by Braden and Case, through tackles earned a forty-yard advance to the Crimson's one-yard line. For some time Braden had been doing for two or three yards in a half-line plunge through the opposing tackle.

Yale loses scoring chance. Remington's quarter, forced all about this and failed to note that Harvard's secondary defense had moved up and was launched in the middle of the line. While the blue crowd was hushed in expectancy Braden was ordered to back center, the very place where the Crimson was strongest. Braden dove both lines surged to a mighty collision. When the heap was unrolled Braden and the ball were about two feet short of the goal line. The blue's battering ram had been stopped.

Another place in the Cambridge line had been stopped. A much better chance of gaining the touchdown was left. Yale kicked the wrong play and messed up the game.

Again in the third period the blue fumbled another glorious chance. Braden's line was again ordered to back center. Braden's line was again ordered to back center. Braden's line was again ordered to back center.

Chance No. 3 seemed up big and big in the third period. Braden's line was again ordered to back center. Braden's line was again ordered to back center. Braden's line was again ordered to back center.

Turn Misericordia Into Touchdown. Princeton had a similar chance at New Haven when Yale fumbled, but Sharpe and Garrity turned the misadventure into a field goal. Harvard were three opportunities gone to waste, and yet Yale scored three points when Jim Braden booted a field goal when fifty yards away from his target for one of the longest goals ever made in American football.

There is little nourishment for Yale players to know their team outwitted Harvard's skillful line. Three times more ground running back ticks. Really this only makes heavier the disappointment for, with all the rushing power, Yale would have kicked Johnny Harvard had the team been provided with a variety of plays and a few tips about how to use and guard against forward passes.

Harvard proved to be a mostly little Casey and Ralph Horvath's kicking foot. Casey well covered, had few chances to set out on brilliant end runs. When the show-down came, however the speedy Irishmen were on the job. It was the same play that won against Yale that tied the score with Princeton in the last two minutes of that memorable battle in Palmer stadium.

Lacked Faith in Captain. The Crimson practically admitted a lack of faith in Murray's generalship when the Harvard captain was brought out of the game in the second period to make way for "Babe" Felton. The

Bradley Calls Meeting of Va. League Owners

Plans for the 1920 baseball season in the Virginia League will be discussed and some definite steps may be taken at a called meeting of the six club owners in the league at Suffolk December 9. The call was issued yesterday by President W. B. Bradley, of the league. The six clubs include Richmond, Petersburg, Newport News, Portsmouth, Norfolk and Suffolk.

As far as could be learned yesterday, nothing but informal discussions will take place at the special meeting of the Virginia League managers, but some developments of important and interesting nature are expected.

The league was recently granted a raise in classification—from Class C to Class B—at a meeting of the minor association at Springfield, Mass., and fans are assured of a better brand of the national pastime next year. Ben W. Wilson, owner of the Richmond club, stated yesterday that he has been negotiating with several well-recommended players whom he thinks would improve the strength of his club. Wilson will not be definitely known until next February, he said, whether "Big" Casey, who has been in the manager of the Richmond club, or present indications point to his acceptance.

MUST OFFER HIGHER PRICE

WASHINGTON CLUB MAY NOT SECURE REDS' OUTFIELDER

Herrmann Notifies Griffith That $2,500 Waiver Is Not Enough for Charlie See.

[Special to The Times-Dispatch.] WASHINGTON, Nov. 29.—The Nationals will probably have to pay considerably more than the waiver price if they are to take Charlie See, youthful Cincinnati outfielder. South this spring, Garry Herrmann, who asked waivers on the $10,000 youngster, has notified Manager Griffith that his claim for the player would have to carry something more substantial than the $2,500 waiver figure if it is to be recognized.

Herrmann is standing on a league rule that stipulates when waivers are asked upon a player purchased within a year the price offered by the claiming club has to be satisfactory to the club requesting waivers. If it isn't, which is true in the See case, the rule specifies that the price shall be adjusted by negotiations between the interested clubs.

In the event of their inability to agree the matter of fixing the compensation is up to the National Commission. Its decision is final. Griffith, upon learning of the stand Herrmann has taken opened negotiations with the Reds for the acquisition of the young outfielder. If he and Herrmann can't agree it will be up to the National Commission to put a price upon which the Nationals can take or leave.

Heydler Backs Herrmann. President Heydler of the National League, who was in Washington visiting relatives, declared that Herrmann's stand in the case is justified by baseball law. He admitted that waivers once asked cannot be withdrawn, but that this does not nullify the rule pertaining to players purchased within a year. The club asking waivers in such cases has to be satisfied as to price, he said.

This will make it possible for Herrmann to put a price on the youngster that may be deemed excessive by the Nationals. Griffith is anxious to land See, but he has given no indication that he will pay a fancy figure for a player who has never had a real big league tryout. The Washington club isn't noted for paying big prices for ball players.

While the Nationals and Reds are dicker over a price for See, the Washington club's claim will be held in abeyance. From the present outlook it appears likely that it will be up to the National Commission to fix the price. The Nationals probably won't get much consolation in that quarter.

WESTERNERS SEEK GAME

Oregon Aggies Would Play Notre Dame, Illinois or Syracuse Next Month.

PORTLAND, ORE., Nov. 29.—Invitations have been telegraphed to the Notre Dame, Illinois, and Syracuse football teams to meet the Oregon Aggie eleven in Portland. The Aggie eleven in Portland. The Aggie eleven in Portland. The Aggie eleven in Portland.

Washington State College was pleased to meet Syracuse at Portland on that date, but Athletic Director Bohler, announced after the college's defeat here Saturday that he had canceled the game as his team is not in shape to play Syracuse or any other big eastern team.

This will make it possible for Herrmann to put a price on the youngster that may be deemed excessive by the Nationals. Griffith is anxious to land See, but he has given no indication that he will pay a fancy figure for a player who has never had a real big league tryout. ## COLUMBIA COACH RESIGNS BECAUSE OF ILL HEALTH

Will Leave for Colorado in Few Days, Where He Expects to Recupere.

[Special to The Times-Dispatch.] NEW YORK, Nov. 29.—Fred T. Dawson, coach of the football, basketball and basketball teams at Columbia, has resigned his connection with the university because of ill health. His resignation, which will be accepted by the university committee on athletics, will take effect at once, and within a few days he will leave for Colorado, where he hopes to recuperate. Because of the suddenness of his action his success in coaching basketball and basketball in the coming season has not been secured, nor have any negotiations been begun for a football coach for next fall.

An official statement yesterday afternoon from Lester O. Damich, graduate manager of athletics, had this to say of Dawson's resignation: "Coach Fred T. Dawson has handed his resignation to the Columbia University committee on athletics. Ill health is the cause for his retirement at this time. For some time past Dawson has not been in good health and he has now found it necessary to give up coaching work at least for the present, and is leaving shortly for the West, where he hopes to recover his health."

Dawson's leaving necessitates securing a basketball coach, as he was in charge of that sport as well as football and basketball. No action has been taken by the athletic committee, due to the suddenness of the resignation. At a meeting in the very near future that matter will be taken up."

Dawson has been troubled with ill health most of the football season. He ended, it was learned, and the complaint was aggravated by overwork. The task of developing a variety of even in the face of injuries, inner dissension and other handicaps. Several times during the season Dawson has been taken to the hospital, and he has been unable to coach the football team.

Dawson began his athletic career at Columbia in 1905, when he was captain of the freshman football team. When the gridiron sport was abolished in that year he went to Princeton, where he graduated in 1910 after having played for three years in the Tiger back field. He was also a member of the baseball team, of which he was the regular catcher for three years, and in his last year the captain.

In 1912 he accepted his first position as coach when he went to Union College to take charge of the football, basketball and baseball teams. He had unusual success in all three sports and turned out consistently good teams in every one of the five years he spent at the up-State college. His football teams suffered only two setbacks, losing to Cornell in 1913 and to Princeton in 1914. In 1915 he was elected to the position of head coach of the football team at Columbia.

John McGraw, maker of managers for Big League Teams, Tries Hard Again.

John McGraw, the dope has it, was instrumental in getting George Stallings his job as manager of the Boston Braves, and Stallings won a pennant with the Braves. McGraw was manager with Brooklyn, and Robby Robinson after the Phillies let him go, then released Pat to Cincinnati and Pat won a pennant with the Reds.

Now John McGraw is trying to land Larry Davis, a job as manager, rumor says, with the St. Louis Cardinals. Will it work out as it did with Stallings, out like it did with Robinson when McGraw loaned him to Cincinnati to manage the Reds? If McGraw can't place Larry with the Cardinals maybe he can get him a managerial job with some minor league team, say Rochester. If he does it is to be hoped Larry will do better than did Mike Donohue, who was placed in a berth at Memphis through McGraw's influence and failed. The Little Napoleon of the Giants probably has placed more baseball friends in jobs, but the percentage is fair.
